‹   About ohia.ai

This app enables citizens and tourists to help locate and identify native and invasive plant species in Hawaii.

If you allow access to your camera and upload an image using this app, data about the image will be collected and stored, including the image itself, the time it was taken, and your current GPS coordinates (only if you allow access to your location). This will help the State of Hawaii track and protect the native plants, as well as track and possibly eradicate the invasive plants.

After the app identifies a plant, you will be presented with a few plant results. Data will also be collected on the following: which plants you choose to view the details of, which plants you choose as a match, and whether or not you indicate that there is no match. This will help improve the accuracy of the plant identifier.

For best results, take photos that are close, in focus, and well-lit. And as much as possible, try to frame only one plant species in your photo.
